THE INSUES OF THE CANVASS.

THE INSUES OF THE CANVASS.

As Stated by Congressman Erreit, of Pittsburgh.

In the ensuing Presidential election, the wo parties, as developed by their course in Congress, stand committed on the following issues:

First—The Democrats are committed to the the work of the congress of the committed to the the committed to the com in Congress, stand committed on the fol-

what they call "free elections," meaning thereby elections free from all restraints upon fraud and force; the Republicans, to honest and pure, as well as free, elections—elections guarded, by national legislation, against fraud in voting for Congressional and Presidential candidates, and around which every possible protection had been thrown to make them honest and pure." The Democrats, for the past three years, have labored assiduously and ontinuously, in serson and out of season, wipe from the statute book all legisla-continuously, in serson and out or easilation upon this subject, in order that all legal restraint upon fraud at the elections should be removed; while the Republicans have stood like a wall of adamant against the repeal or modification of that legislation, and against all attempts to obstruct or nullify it.

Second—The Democrats, as a party, stand committed to the policy of free trade. Individuals in that party have voted otherwise; but they are the exceptions which prove the rule. The Republican party, on the contrary, stands committed to the policy of protection. A lew Republican members of Congress have voted with the revenue tariff men; but they have been to few too change the fact that the Republican party, as a party, is on the

with the revenue tarin men; but they have been to few too change the fact that the Republican party, as a party, is on the side of protection, and is the sole reliance of the American people for the maintenance of that principle.

Third—The Democrats stand committed to the pelicy of disturbing, if they can, the solid basis upon which our national currency reets; and whatever lears or apprehensions may prevail as to the permanence of the financial policy of the Government, have grown out of Democratic assaults upon it. The Republican party on the other hand, stands unliedly for a sound currency, upon a coin basis, and for the maintenance, tree from disturbance, of our present excellent financial system.

Fourth—The Democratic party, true to the stinstitucts, rallies to a man around the often defeated doctrine of State rights, as the South understands that doctrine, while the Republican party true to the patriotic impulse which led it to sustain the supremacy of the nation in the late rebellion, stands, as it has always stood, in she helid that the United States are a na ebellion, stands, as it has always stood, in he belief that the United States are a na the belief that the United States are a nation, not a mere confederacy of States, and it is the sole political organization that has the great principle at its foundation. The cardinal principle of State rights, which led to, and overthrown by, the war of the rebellion, lies at the foundation of the Democratic party, and permeates its every act to-day; while the supremacy of the nation in national affairs is the cardinal principle of the Republican party, and characterizes its action. It is this radical difference which justifies and necessitates the existence of the Republican party.

How Near It Came to Edmunds. Editor Benedict tells the Burlington Vt.) Free Press that it came nearer being Edmunds than is generally known. It is a fact, he says, that the Grant men had selected the Vermont Senator as their econd choice, and "had there been a lozen less votes for Grant and a doze nore for Blaine, on the first ballot, or had the confident boastings of the Blaine men at any subsequent time been near fulfillment, doubtless a combination, fully planned, would have carried the day, and given the party Mr. Edmuncs for President." He adds: At 11 o'clock on Tuesday morning Mr. Conkling, if he had chosen so to do, could have named the head of thaticket. An hour later all that was left to him was to name the tail of it. When, on the 35th ballot, the signs that the collapse of the dead-lock had come becone unmistakable, the Grant leaders hurriedly passed the word that they would go for Edmunds the next ballot. There is room for question whether the support of Massachusetts was not of more harm than help to him. They were so bitter in their opposition to Grant, and so utterly out of relations with the quarters form which the first strong start to Edmunds must come, if it was to come at all, that they could accomplish little for their candidate. And their abandonment of him for Sherman, on Tuesday morning, at a time shent was rought clear that in no the confident boastings of the Blaine mer time when it was quite clear that in nevent could Mr. Sherman be nominated was naturally taken for a distinct sign that Edmunds's friends had given up all hope of a combination on him. Had the Massachusetts men held back their vote on Monday, and thrown it for Edmunds Tuesday morning, it would probably have been of more service to him. It is true that they said they would come back to him, if occasion demanded; but of course no such occasion came, and they did not expect that one would come, or do anything to bring it on.

If the Greenbackers were really a party organization, if they really entertained any longer a hope or a dream of success at the polts, they would not have suffered this deluge of the "isms" to sweep them from their moorings. But the simple fact of resumption, of the substitution of real for ideal money, his quenched this "soft" faction, this boil which indicated nothing more than the evil condition of the body politic. The people may be led astray in bad times, but not in prosperous ones. They know a good thing when they have it and grasp it, and a few months' experience has taught them the superiority of hard money, or its immediate and convertible representative, as a medium of exchange over any other kind of currency.

The Outcome of Greenbackism.—The convention at Chicago which ensued up on the adjournment of the Republican convention gives the country the indication that we have probably seen the end of Greenback partyism. The convention, in effect, seems to have been made up the odds and ends, the "leavings" of all political factions that have been trying to raise their heads in this country of late years. Labor reformers, women's rights people, teetotallers, socialists, Fourierites, communists, red Republicans, all seem to have been seed to provide the provided of the seems of the polity and the seed of the provided of the provided and struggled to speak at once. The result was a sort of pandemonium, through which beans as ort of pandemonium, through which beans as ort of pandemonium, through which beans and political factors. The communisters are leaved to pendemonium, through which beans as the polity they would not have suffered this delige of the "isms" to sweep them from their moorings.
